Tarek was a quiet boy who loved drawing. He was not good at sports like his friends, so he often felt different. One day, his school announced an art fair. Tarek wanted to join, but he was nervous. His teacher, Mr. Ali, gave him support and told him, "Your unique talent is your strength". Encouraged by these words, Tarek decided to draw something that was special to him: a large, colorful picture of a lion with a kind face. He worked on it every day after school. When he showed it at the art fair, he was worried his friends would laugh. Instead, they were amazed. They told him his drawing was creative and wonderful. Tarek's drawing won a prize for being the most unique piece of art. For the first time, he didn't feel bad about being different. He learned that his unique talent was something to be proud of.
